

Aynur Khalilova

Ph.D. in Philology, associate professor

Shusha - the address of victory!

The year is 2020... Humanity is fighting the deadly and miserable COVID-19 virus...

One would think that even if the gunshots aimed at the innocent will not stop, at least it will be relatively reduced, and people will postpone their insidious intentions for the time being, if only temporarily.

In the words of Camus, after all, "when misfortune prevails, people get used to the conditions, that is, they learn to be silent."

In fact, even if we approach it with ordinary logic, it was understandable to have such an expectation in a difficult time when the whole world, including the region, is thinking about the fight against the rapidly spreading pandemic, when moral-psychological, socioeconomic difficulties are experienced due to the current situation, and people are struggling for life. But there was one thing that we forgot (actually we didn't forget!) - the Armenian character.

At that time - in July 2020, during the Tovuz battles, which were launched by the enemy for the purpose of invasion and military-political provocation, in which twelve soldiers and one civilian were killed, "April

The martyrdom of Major-General Polad Hashimov, the brave and zealous son of our country, whom we know well from the battles, created a new wave of national awakening and self-recovery in Azerbaijan, the people united,

It turned into a big turning point in the settlement of the Karabakh war by rooting in the spirit of war against oil.

The news of Polad Hashimov's martyrdom spread to all parts of the country, causing a great echo and shaking the whole of Azerbaijan.

Because "War is the solution to the treasure of the enemy, // The one who is not is slow on the way to marriage" (Jahan Shah Haqiqi).

The great day when our war of justice will begin will be remembered forever on September 27...